THE HUMAN RIGHTS COMMITTEE,

Aware of the growing problems of refugee discrimination throughout the world,

Acknowledging that safety is a human right,

Recognizing that this right is not given equally to all peoples,

Noting with deep concern that some countries aren't stable or prepared enough to welcome refugees,

1. Calls upon countries to work together to support/house/welcome refugees instead of solely bearing the burden on one country;
2. Creates a program for the safe movement of refugees from temporary housing to permanent housing in other countries;
3. Requests countries with the political, economic, and physical stability to house refugees;
4. Encourages funding from more economically developed nations to allocate funding towards the aiding of refugees towards asylum;
5. Mandates the respectful treatment of refugees,
 - a. Implementing governmental protocols to monitor their treatments;
6. Discourages decisions as to which refugees to allow into a country based upon bias about race, nationality, education, and socioeconomic status;
7. Motions for further UN discussions to determine whether or not a country is politically, economically, or physically able to support refugees
8. Strongly urges the creation of a benchmark to assess a country's eligibility to take in refugees, based on population, economic and social stability, land size, bias statistics, geographical resources, and proximity;
9. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.
